Gaffer, Best Boy, on set, off set, Rigging Gaffer, Rigging Best Boy - I decided they are all positions I should say yes to depending on the job and who's asking me to do it. I believe its important to keep learning and understanding all aspects of the lighting department, its coordination to cinematography and production requirements, whilst keeping me up to date with the latest tools, techniques and technology as the rate of development and change in set lighting continues to accelerate. Only accepting work as a gaffer would mean the end of my up-skilling, just when things are changing so rapidly. When I gaffer for you, you can be assured that my ideas / suggestions / judgement and decision making is based on exposure to a wide and up to date professional experience and best practise observations. There's many ways to do many things, some are quicker, some are safer and some are cheaper - there might even be one that is all 3. I aim to be able to give my cinematographers, producers and production managers the best options available, working as a partner to deliver our directors vision to the audience, within the time and budget constraints of every and any shoot day.
